

In some countries flights have become much cheaper compared to other forms of transportation. Some people think this is a good development, while others are concerned about this situation. Discuss both views and include your own opinion.

Finding a faster way for transportation has always appealed to human beings throughout history and lots of efforts have been ~~made done~~ to achieve this goal. Therefore, it is an obvious matter that after the appearance of airlines there would be some attraction to improving e this ~~mode term~~ of transportation.

Although some maintain that this progress has been a crucial issue, there are others that consider it ~~as~~ a threat and are concerned about it. In this essay I am we are going to assess different ideas and notions. As far much as I am concerned, according to the latest survey conducted by a reputable institute ~~which~~ called “the national corporation of statistics” results show that the proportion of mortality in each year by airplanes compared to other transportation facilities is much less. Hence, anxiety about having ~~unin~~secure travels by airplanes is not logical. On the other hand, these days not only have flights become more secure, but also cheaper and more convenient. Of course there are pros and cons in anything, but what could be the problem of the other groups?

With no doubt, regardless of what statistics show, standing on the ground is giving more feeling s of security e than hanging in the sky, but there are ~~an~~ other aspects which have to be considered, for instance, if flights become cheaper to the extent that other transportations become uneconomical we would encounter the crisis of unemployment of many people that work in other fields of transporting.

In conclusion, ~~to~~ establishing an ~~adequate proper~~ proportion between the prices of each form of transport could be the right/proper solution for this phenomenon. As nothing can stop humans to develop, nothing can save us from problems but the human’s tact and intelligence.
