

The modern family structure and roles of each member have changed in the recent years. Do you think it has a negative or a positive effect on families? Give your opinion and relevant examples.

In past, there was a clearly defined family structure in a way that fathers and mothers played a key role in their families' leadership. although this form still continues in some traditional families, with growing complexities in lives which originates from modern life the family structures are completely are changing. Now a query requiring to be raised is whether does this approach has negative effects or not.

In the past, families inspired deep reverence for society, so the youth were always after starting a family soon. In this society all of roles in family had been well defined, and consequently when people suffered from any the trouble, they could hope to solve it this problem by consultation with their family and if the problem would not be solved, the motivation behind them that their families provided could decrease the misfortune. However, In the modern family unfortunately the family members are drifting apart together. With By technological developments and the great tendency among youth to have virtual relation instead of face-time real one, people tend to live far from their family and this approach unintentionally can lead to develop major difficulties like emotional spiritual ones that can be derived from loneliness. Additionally some claim that one of the great changes in modern families is changing the roles in a way that the children play a leadership role in families and leads to irreparable damages in not only the family's integrity continuity but also ruins the children's character and raises the self-centered children who are lost unfamiliar with their position in society.

By contrast, Whereas some assert that the modern family's vital statistics are far better than those of the traditional institutional family, and of all previous family forms. Quantum changes in income, mortality rates, life expectancy, nutritional status, educational opportunities, and other indicators of the quality of life occur in response to industrialization, modern health care, education, and other aspects of socio-economic development. It is widely agreed that families are better off with these changes than without them. furthermore, they maintain that these eminent benefits can outweigh the disadvantages like the changing the roles in families.

In sum, I believe that that two forms of families have some benefits besides drawbacks. We should strike a relative balance between them. It is the duty of the government to provide some educational plans for families to keep pace with changes. in this way, media can play a crucial role in educating families.
