some people say that the only reason for learning foreign language is in order to travel to or work in a foreign country. Others say that these are not the only reason why someone should learn a foreign language.

Discuss both these views and give your opinion.

These days, learning a new language is quite common among people. Some believe that they learn a new language as they want to immigrate to a new country for working, or pass their holidays, but others assert that learning a new language is not just for working or pastime purposes. They argue that it is going to be a necessity for future.

Nowadays, many people are eager admire to take a job or have fun in a foreign country, so ~~So~~ they start to learn a new language. They believe that employers are more eager to recruit bilingual rather than monolingual staff (staff instead of monolingual). In addition, spending holidays in other countries is becoming/growing/getting very common these days, so people commence ~~to learn~~ learning a new language in order to have a better pastime. For example, in my country many people start to learn Turkish since they would like to spend their holidays in Turkey.

Then, others believe that we are going to live in a borderless ~~borderless~~ world, so learning languages is going to be a must/an essential. They assert that learning a new language will help people to grasp ~~—~~ understand/feel/identify other races easier. Moreover, they argue that nowadays students require to do more and more research in comparison with the past, thus they should read more recent articles many of which (which many of ~~them~~)-~~have~~ ~~has~~ been written in other languages, hence they are quite dependent on other languages.

In conclusion, I strongly believe that learning a new language will affect all aspects of individuals' life. In other words, it is going to be an essential for future life. I mean learning a new language is not only for especial purposes~~s~~, but also for passing a routine life.
