

It is generally believed that the Internet is an excellent means of communication but some people suggest that it may not be the best place to find information.

Standing at the turn of the new century, we observe that we need much information. Many people try to find this information in libraries or scientific seminars, while others search on ~~in~~ the Internet. A question which is a matter of concern is, where is the best place to find your necessary information? I am, to a great extent of the opinion that, we can find much information on ~~in~~ the Internet and it is the major information source.

To begin with, in the new era no one can ignore the satisfaction and convincences-conveniences offered by the Internet. All persons from all countries share their information ~~in~~ on the Internet. Broadly speaking, you can see many websites ~~in-the-Internet~~ which help you to find your information and solve your problems. To be more specific you can search easily among million sources and some search engines such as google and yahoo facilitate your work. As an illustration if you decide to select a country to travel to~~it~~, the Internet will help you to gain ~~give~~ information about that, see pictures of that country, select your hotel and find the exotic places ~~in-that-country~~ and this is the best way ~~which~~ you can access/obtain/get/gain ~~give~~ your information.

Of equal importance is the fact that these information sources are ~~freely~~. Simply stated, in many libraries and seminars you must pay great expenses to these sources to guide you. On the one hand, you need much information in your life and if we eliminate the Internet from our information sources, we must register in many libraries and pay their fees. On the other hand, the Internet is the closest source to you and you can access to the Internet in every place. However, what I stated cannot be over-generalized to all contexts, so sometimes ~~some-times~~ you cannot access ~~to~~-such information and you will find it with advice, experience or with other methods.

From my perspective, the internet is the most valuable information source. To recapitulate the reasons, not only do many people share their sources therein ~~the-Internet~~, but also that is economical and easy to access.