

Some people believe that visitors to other countries should follow local customs and behavior. Others disagree and think that the host country should welcome cultural differences.

Discuss both these views and give your own opinion.

Some governments have restrictions upon visitors' doings and dressing in their countries and it can be fair and unfair in different situations. This is a complicated issue which should be studied in each country according to their religion and politics to acquire wealth for their citizens.

Some countries have such a radical regime that governments prefer religious limitations to be respected rather than economic benefits for their citizens, and when this issue is about foreign individuals they are more particular, ~~but~~ But these limitations can adversely affect the people's income sources ~~of people~~. For example, tourists who don't like to behave or dress the same as native people of the destination country, more likely will cancel their trip ~~to~~ there and it's a significant drawback of such radical ~~policies~~ politics.

Furthermore, when a foreign visitor ~~comes~~ came with his or her own clothes and behaves ~~naturally~~ normally, most likely people in the visited country will learn something more about the his/her visitor's culture and ~~best case in the better case~~ perhaps they learn better relationships and standards than they have. ~~In~~ For contrast, they might learn better ~~clothing~~ dressing styles or better personal hygiene from visitors.

Though there are many drawbacks ~~to~~ of these restrictions, there are some social rules which ~~are~~ that is better to be respected. For example, drinking alcoholic drinks in ~~prohibited~~ abandoned places such as streets or public places is neither ethically nor lawfully accepted and it's better for visitors to obey this rule. Totally, not only is studying the destination country's regulations before a trip useful, but it also can help a tourist to enjoy ~~more in~~ his or her journey more.

Consequently, in my opinion, governments should not force visitors to obey any rule or restriction, and visitors should respect the destination's religious or social regulations voluntarily and use a smile as a global communication language.
