

Happiness is considered very important in life
Why it is difficult to define?
What factors are important in achieving happiness?

What is happiness? Why everyone is searching for it but most of the time they feel upset and not satisfied with their lives? Happiness definition has a huge diversity and it differs from one person to another and it depends on one's vision to the world.

For many people around the world happiness means to have a real love or a supporting family. A good family and the passion you have for them could be motivating and plays a significant role ~~on~~in every person's life. When you enjoy being with your family members and the positive energy you receive achieve from them, passing through hard difficulties in your life seems ~~plausible~~surmountable.

Some other people define their happiness materialistically. They need lots of money, luxurious wealthy house and car to feel as a cheerful person. All these people do is to alleviate the temptation of money, power and fame. But these money lovers barely feel satisfied with themselves, because they always seek something more to gain and they ~~never~~ ~~haven't~~ reached their goals. ~~yet~~.

There are some individuals who find their happiness in being in an appropriate level in society. Job satisfaction, being in a position they deserve and being surrounded by people who respect them makes them happy. (social status)

All in all, we can't categorize all individuals and their personalities. People's ambitions may change during their lifetime, and moreover do their thoughts and characteristics. The shortest path to happiness, in my opinion, is to think positively about everything and enjoy every moment of life.