

Do you agree or disagree with the following statement? Universities should give the same amount of money to their students' sports activities as they give to their university libraries. Use specific reasons and example to support your opinion.

Nowadays for most people universities are an essential part of their life. Colleges and universities can help us to find a good/decent career. In my personal opinion, universities must spend the same amount of money on ~~to~~ their students' sports activities, as they do on ~~to~~ their university libraries.

To begin with, many universities offer their students a lot of facilities for engaging in sports activities besides their normal academic programs. There is a gym and a swimming pool on almost every campus. There are also many other groups such as football or basketball teams for students to join and enjoy sports during their spare time. On the other hand, this is a good chance to help students maintain their physical health, and it takes up a lot of the universities resources.

As the saying goes, "a sound mind in a sound body" "a healthy mind lives in a healthy body." Many researches are showing the relationship between physical sports and mental abilities which concerns s a good physical condition which creates a strong mental power. In addition, a group of students are not interested in studying. Therefore, something like sport could be a great motivation for them to get degrees and graduate.

On the other hand, students need the most recent library tools available to get the best education. It also costs money for universities to keep their libraries open. An updated ~~up-dated~~ library needs new published books, computer programs, access to the internet which ~~those~~ are expensive and pupils can use them to find information all around the world. For instance, during my master education, I needed some special reference books for completing ~~of~~ my thesis that unfortunately our library lacked. Furthermore, the quality and quantity of the library indicate the level of a university.

To wrap it up, the advantages of sports activities are undeniable. Universities had ~~have~~ better spend money on improving sports facilities and organizing clubs besides the investment in academic materials in order that students can develop comprehensively.
