

Research has shown people's personality is influenced more by the characteristics they are born with rather than the experiences they may gain, while I share the opposite view.

Firstly, our behavior is changed by socializing with various types of people who may not have the same culture. Secondly, hanging out with different individuals may cause alteration in our characteristics. Traveling is an instance which can cause a shift in our personality. Thirdly, visiting and experiencing different places might make us completely different. Also, as a result of difficulties people may not be the same as they were born. An individual can encounter hard situations which changes his attitude.

we live in a modern world which- where pace is terribly fast. To be familiar with new things can have big effects on our personality.

Technologicaly improvement not only changes the humans' life, but also their personality. The one who might think traditionally, can be changed through technology. leads to change his thought.

However, there are some stereotypes which people might be born with and have to live with them, but these kinds of beliefs believes might be changed as a consequence of other cultures. We are communicating with other nations and various cultures, so the stability of these stereotypes may not be possible. A The staggering number of our behaviors are flexible. Few people can be seen whose who their personality has not changed since they were born.

To sum up, the effects of born characteristics cannot be ignored, but .But, I opine that our personality is shaped by experiences.
