

It is better to live a short exciting life rather than a long uneventful one. To what extent do you agree or disagree with this statement?

Some people try to participate in strange activities to have a funny and satisfactory life ~~although however~~ it might ~~lead to them having a~~ be really short life, whereas many others are advocates of a monotonous, but endless life.living-styles.

There is no doubt that adventures assist people in facing to face other stimulating aspects of life, and makes daily usual boring life different. Besides, unscheduled events aid us in becoming to become magnificently sophisticated and hone our living skills. In addition, these incidents help us to find a better knowledge of our capabilities. Therefore, many people say/argue/maintain cite that the more adventure a life has, ~~of~~ the higher quality it will be.

On the other hand, some critics believe that these events will deviate humankind from the direct way of their life. They claim that it is beneficial to have a quiet life and stick to on your simple one to live free and long. Although the occurrence of occurring some events in people's lives could change the uniformity of them, they can diverge humans/man men from the eventual target which the human race explores which is and it is calmness.

After all, I certainly believe that what is the sweetness of life if it is always usual and no accident happens? Despite the fact that most ~~of~~ people are trying to provide themselves with a silent and private life, from my point of view, having a life which is full of adventures, however it is short, will be much more pleasant than a long boring straight life.

In conclusion, although most of the human efforts were to find peace and quietness, a life without any enthusiastic stories will not be hilarious for the majority of people.
