

Some people say private schools should be banned because they give students an unfair advantage on others. To what extent do you agree or disagree? Give your opinion and include relevant examples from your own experience.

The importance of proper education in pupil's nurture is undeniable, whereas selecting public schools versus solitary ones has always been ~~always~~ a controversial issue, especially for parents who worry about their children's future.

The efficiency of non-government solitary institutes has been ~~was~~ noticed by many people, magnificently those who can afford the expenses. These schools prepare special courses for their students such as extra training hours for fundamental lessons which are made productive by well-organized pamphlets. Paving the way for pupils' higher educations and particularly remarkably university exams, these non-governmental organizations tend to propose intelligent learning epochs for those who are interested in and buying them it.

The amount of expenditure besides the method which private schools apply obey to select noble students that resulted in isolating some young learners kids from others created prepared reasons for the to public to bring these institutes to question. Many critics assert that selecting approaches, training programs and exorbitant remarkable tuition fees which are routine practices progresses in such schools are red lines that insulate the rich. Therefore, it magnifies the sense of greed among the poor which are deprived depraved of imparting better education.

Despite the fact that all parents spare no effort to get ready all prerequisite fundamentals for the best instructing courses for their children, eventually they realize that without the help of a professional organization no remarkable success could be achieved. Therefore, I personally believe that the presence of such schools would be beneficial under certain circumstances s and that is these institutes should strike a balance between students' intelligence and their parents' financial wealth so that pupils with poor parents could have the chance of being privileged of superior scholastic educations.

In a nutshell, I believe putting a ban on these schools would not be a logical action while they can be beneficial to society under controlled conditions as we can see some of them like the National Organization of Talented Students.
