

Many people believe that women make better parents than men and that this is why they have greater role in raising children in most societies. Others claim that men are just as good as women at parenting. Write an essay expressing your point of view.

It is vivid that Women's role in families is both crucial and undeniable according to their ability of pregnancy and raising children. Whether they are better parents than men or have an equal role in raising children is questioned. When it comes to this argument, I maintain that, the women's role in nurturing is prominent enough to become incomparable with men's part.

First and foremost, it is crystal clear that the sense of child-rearing exists in women's nature. We can find it out when a little girl is playing with her dolls or trying to imitate her mother's behavior. Unlike boys who are interested in playing with car toys or action video games, girls are attracted to acting as a mother in their plays and have the thoughts of making family from the early ages.

In the second place, owing to the fact that females are less aggressive and naturally have more gentle manners, they are more preferable to nurturing a child. Throughout history, men have been more likely to perpetrate crimes or attend wars, generally, women are more patient and it is less probable for them to resort to violence in attempting to solve their problems with their offspring.

Thirdly, females have much better communication skills in compared with males. This characteristic has a vital impact on rearing a child. Not only do children learn how to communicate with other people but also they will pick up moral values by looking at their mother's way of communicating.

Generally, despite the fact that fathers have the supportive role in families and endorse the family in difficult crises, the mothers' roles are highlighted enough to be representing the essential parts of a child's treatment.
