

Some people argue that to set out a new business, counting on a certain amount of money is inevitable, while others believe this could be possible by means of influential connections. To what extent do you agree? Write your own idea

Economists always encourage people to begin their own business. It is necessary for any country to be productive and invent new ideas for economic growth that they called GDP which is short form of gross domestic product. In simple terms it means the monetary value of all the finished goods and services produced within a country's borders in a specific time period. But when we talk about setting a new business up we are faced a big question: "how much wealth should we ~~should~~ spend for trigger"?

Many people think that initiating a new business is impossible without sufficient money. They argue that to start anything in business you require a minimum wealth but others believe that money isn't a big matter, but the fundamental factor depends on how much credit you have. They explain that influential connections could compensate the lack ~~lake~~ of money.

I think the second groups is are right because nowadays big financial businesses in the world like The Wall Street are based on credits. In many stock markets people work with a wealth that is not theirs and they buy things just by their credits which that we can call ~~it~~ virtual money and then they sell those things and earn a profit get economic benefits without spending a penny. These modern financial connections metamorphose into the world's economy. And many developed countries use this system for their GDP.

Many times a simple idea could transform to a big international business. There are many companies that they are looking for an innovative idea to grow ~~th~~ their wealth. Even there is a website where that people upload their business ideas ~~to them~~ and ask for financial aid to realize ~~came~~ a visionary idea ~~true~~. And sometimes they find good investors if their idea is worth in website subscribers' 's-audiences' eyes.

As a conclusion I should say the most important thing for setting up ~~out~~ a new business is having a good idea for your trade and how to attract investments for its trigger. In other words, a fundamental requirement for a successful business is not how much money you have, but rather ~~hence~~ the way in which that you present ~~perform~~ it to the investors.
