

People should be allowed to continue to work as long as they want to, or and be forced to retire at a particular age such as 60 or 65.

Do you agree or disagree?

In some countries there is not any obligation for the age of retirement. But in others, they have to quit their job after a certain number of specific years. In my opinion, people should work for years they have enough and useful ability regardless of the age.

On the one hand, this is true, after some years of work, the elderly should make the possibility of work for the youngers with higher energy and performance. Firstly, the younger people who are most educated and are almost in qualified category with specific professional skills might be more effective in society. For example, the newly graduated engineers have the essential knowledge which plays the a crucial role in preceding tasks and are also familiar with new technology which can produce effective outputs. They know how to use computers in different parts of a project which makes the progress significantly in shorter time. Secondly, they need jobs to live. If nobody becomess retired, there would not be any vacant position for other people to work, . Therefore, the rate of joblessness/unemployment in society would increase at in an alarming rate.

On the other hand, I believe that the society needs individuals the guys with high quality and valuable experience in different types of jobs, thus we would have the opportunity to benefit from their skills to retrain non-inexperienced graduatess d people for unseen future. For instance, in factories, there are some people with more than a good decades of experience in a specific job who can lead others to learn the job or retrain them in the workplace with less cost. In addition, however educated with valuable knowledge might come from universities, there would be some subtle tricks which are is not taught in books and should be gained in really critical situations. In addition, if the people leave their jobs when they are still energetic, they might lose their motivation to live any longer and also feel they have been put aside from ~~the~~ society which contributes to some diseases such as depression and Alzheimer.

In conclusion, I definitely believe that the experienced people should not quit their jobs as they reach ~~to~~ a specific age, they should play their vital role as a master trainer for younger educated groups for the future which would be beneficial for ~~the~~ society and the person itself.
