Do you agree or disagree with the following statement?

If people have the opportunity to get a secure job, they should take it right away rather than wait for a job that would be more satisfying.

In almost every country, the second question after his name that is asked of from an individual to introduce himself is "What is your career?". Today it is not possible for everyone to find a decent job which matches their education, personality and desirable salary just after finishing their studies. Some people are of the idea that by lowering your expectation and taking a less satisfactory job instead of a (dream) job that you dreamed of and study for could be take in to consideration. However, others prefer to wait for their ideal working position. To me the latter point of view has more evidence to rely on.

From the one hand, the fact that finding job today is not as easy as it was decades ago due to the high rate of unemployment , may increase the risk of waiting for a job position in the future which is more relevant to our studies and makes us more satisfied. For instance, in recent years many workers from countries like China as well as India are applying for a job in other developed countries which makes it harder for people of those countries to find the job not only owing to the higher number of demand to get the job, but also because of a lower salary that they request to do the same work.

On From the other hand, having an experience of working in a job which you are not trained for may be counterproductive in your working resume. For example, if due to the lack of interest in your job, you do not communicate properly with your co-workers and supervisor, this seemingly simple problem may even cause you to end up to being fired from the company which could be an undeniable negative point in your CV. Moreover, even if you would be successful in your job and just leaving the company in a period less that 6 months just because you found the job that you dreamed of, this experience of working short time in a company is not a positive one in your resume.

Personally, were I to opt for either of the notions, I would rather to seize the moment and get the job which may not seems decent to me owing to the facts mentioned above. Furthermore, considering the fast pace of development in countries, the new generation of job position may be introduced to people across the globe as we could see some sign of it in nowadays. Today many employees are working as freelancer and so they are their own boss and just working at their homes which was a dream for many people in past. For a tangible example, many remote software developers from all over the globe, especially, India are programming on a project that they were hired for in high-paying countries such as the U.S. as well as the U.K..

In a nutshell, finding a decent job is becoming harder and harder day by day. Even though many people prefer to just only work in an ideal, satisfactory job, I would rather to be more realistic and work in a temporary but less desirable position till I find the job that matches with my major, personality and interest.
