

People remember special gifts or presents that they receive. Why?

It is undeniable that most people like to receive presents from their surroundings for every reason and they become extremely happy but they only might remember the special ones which are more valuable to them. There are lots of reasons why people remember the special gifts forever such as where, when, why and how they get them.

Firstly, special gifts have some unique characteristics in financial terms /for money aspects, we can mention that most of the time we pay a lot of money to buy a precious object for a person to show our deep emotion and respect, therefore, this action makes the object as an unforgettable one. For example, when a gift is an expensive car, it would be definitely valuable which would remain in mind forever. Secondly, the occasion for which what we decide to choose that object as a gift makes it unique. The people usually give presents to each other for several occasions such as Birthday, a wedding anniversary, a child's Birth and university graduation. All these moments are typically meaningful for everyone, Consequently, the gifts which are given could be memorable too for many years.

On the other hand, we normally receive presents from the people whom we love and they play a significant role in our personal or even in our professional life. Thus, these from their side would bring us a deep sympathy and emotion to our heart to be unforgettable. For example, when an employee is will-be-being retired after thirty years, his manager or his colleagues will give him a present to thank him for the years of cooperation, thus, this gift would be memorable. In addition, most of the time these gifts are the ones which we have ever had dreamt to have, so we would not forget the moment of achieving them.

In conclusion, receiving gifts from the people whom we love is joyfulness but we only remember the ones which who are special because they are usually given on in occasions such as Birthdays or wedding anniversaries and also in most cases times they are valuable whether either in money aspects or in emotional aspects which make them memorable too.
