

Some people believe that the best way to spend a holiday in a foreign country is to go out to meet people, instead of staying in hotel most of the time.

What is your opinion? Give reasons include relevant examples of your own experience.

To what extent do you agree or disagree with this statement?

It is understandable that people having had to work in a stressful ambience would rather ~~to~~ travel on an all-inclusive tour in which all they need is provided within the hotel where they can rest and fully recharge their batteries. Yet, my travels have been and will be planned to achieve further goals.

Before planning a journey for a holiday, everyone has a questionnaire to fill out ~~in~~ all with the individual answers. There need to be questions about how long the travel is going to be, who they want to go with and where they want to go which all depends on the goal of the travel per se. Providing travellers ~~ed~~ with literally everything, some hotels leave the people with nothing to go out for. In Antalya, for instance, ~~z~~ and in one of the five-star hotels where everything is handy and unbelievably convenient to use, people consequently will not find any reason to leave the hotel for, not to get in touch with the world outdoors nor for going to a restaurant or a pub, for example. [They might also ponder why to leave such a pleasant comfort and comfortable pleasure, why now that they have paid for any single moment of their stay and all the thoroughly enjoyable things all in hand.]

Aimed for a variety of purposes, a travel could still be planned eminently differently. There are many to whom m travel means something more than relaxation and entertainment, something entirely novel/unlike. [In other words, Not only do they travel to get some rest and be prepared for the working days to come, but to learn new things, be enough in nature enough and get introduced to other cultures and people of different ethnicities, their ancestors' monuments, traditions and beliefs as well as the way they live and what they live on.] Through Going on such journeys people make the most of their free time which is to ~~(the)~~ many quite a better plan on which one could travel.

Followed from the above, as someone whose experience includes both aforementioned travel types, [I will ~~definitely highly warily~~ choose the places I go to and the things I would spend my time on not as a whole nor regarded as serving a single purpose but one by one according to why I would be travelling whether to relax and/or to visit somewhere or someone or else. Still,] rarely would I opt for the former travel type excluding everything but rest and entertainment.
