Some people believe that teaching children at home is best for a child's development while others think that it is important for children to go to school.

Discuss the advantages of both methods and give your own opinion.

Homeschooling or regular school? It is a controversial issue and there is a heated dispute between educationalists and some people. The former ~~Some educationalists~~ insist on ~~persist in~~ sending children to school, while some over-sensitive parents are inclined to homeschooling although numerous benefits of attending school have been proven by experts.

Some parents who are excessively worried about their offspring prefer to hire a private teacher to teach them. That way, parents can monitor both their children and the process that they are studying/study in, and also they can spare much more time beside their family. Furthermore, they are safe from being bullied ~~bullying~~ by their classmates at school. Meanwhile, these children have a more flexible schedule not to mention that they can express their interest and point of view about their curriculum.

However, attending school is twice as beneficial as teaching children at home, advantages~~,~~ which homeschool proponents fail to get. Students taught at home might be isolated. If not communicated with their peers, children may become diffident and without a doubt in their adulthood they will not be able to interact with other people easily and it is imaginable that they are more vulnerable to ~~against~~ social ills than those who have experienced presence in schools. Attending schools and socializing with various people, children can broaden their minds as opposed to those who spend their time just with a teacher at home or at most with their few siblings.

In conclusion, I would argue that if parents let their children go to school, in fact they have given them a chance ~~them~~ to encounter different situations independently so that they can stand on their own foot. Not only can they learn a variety of skills in ~~at~~ those educational environments, but also it develops their self-steem ~~steam~~ and deter them from being spoiled.
