

Today more people are travelling than ever before. Why is this the case? What are the benefits of traveling for the traveler?

Nowadays a host of people go abroad or to other cities compared with 50 years ago. This trend has given rise to arguments among critics ~~that~~ as to why this is the case and what ~~are~~ the advantages are. The following essay will discuss some of the factors which affect the situation and several advantages of the activity for the traveler.

Travelling can be a unique experience for everybody, as humans s we love to explore the unknown. This it is not a new –age phenomenon. Ancient travelling due to long distances took months until travellers/holiday makers/vacationrs ~~they~~ reached their destination a place and it was of serious hazard for them because there were not cars, airplanes s and ships s. someone could go anywhere that they approached travel agencies to reserve their tickets, whereas in this day and age technology has have made transporting ing passengers more convenient than ever before so that virtually all people can travel. They book their tickets staying at home.

Although the merits of travel cannot be stated in few words, travelling provides travelers with an opportunity to experience a new culture, various cuisines s and meet different kinds s of people. Another major good point of trips s is that it relaxes the mind and it can broaden your horizons. In other words, individuals who are extremely busy can reduce their stresses by going on a trip. Besides, the experience which a person has on in a journey can enlighten his/her mind. In addition, visiting monuments and historical places can inform people of new scientificce fields.

To sum up, technology and financial resources which people can reach have made it easy for people to travel. Not only does this benefits this travelers, but also the hosts.