

Some people believe that adults should follow their traditional culture. Others, however, think that it is not necessary in the modern society. Discuss both views and give your own opinion.

Culture, an inevitable part of human beings, has passed down to throughout nations over the centuries. Some consider following culture traditionally as an essential part of their life, while others presume that we should entirely eliminate it. Nevertheless, in this writer's view, a more effective approach would be to bring culture into the twenty-first century.

As previously indicated, culture is inherited from our ancestors. Consequently, some humankind human kinds want s it to be authentic as before. However, this strong belief may give rise to a disruptive extremism. In other words, any change in it or even a little inattention to it would be considered to be a disrespectful behavior by the advocates of this side (devoted group).

On the contrary, those who support the champions of the idea of the civilized society without any conventional views tend to look at the bright side of this issue. They claim that the next generation should entirely get familiar with these deep-rooted beliefs, but in terms of lifestyle and the manner of living, they should go beyond the restrictions. Therefore, this unrestricted upbringing method could contribute to the stimulation of these juvenile's creativity.

In conclusion, while some are entirely opposed to any change in an indigenous culture, others consume that in the matter of having a sophisticated example for a long life, heritage_ s/lifestyles/attitudes should be changed or even eliminated in order to take the interest of each and every one into account.
