

Task:

Disruptive school students have a negative influence on others. Students who are noisy and disobedient should be grouped and thought separately.

Do you agree or disagree?

How to deal with unruly students is a controversial issue among the educational experts. While there are persuasive arguments in favor of isolating these kind of pupils, others claim that not only will it have adverse effects, but also fail (will be failed) to settle this issue in the pedagogical institutes. My personal notion in this regard is similar to that of the latter group.

Advocates assert that it will be totally wrong if we sacrifice studious students for noisy ones since it is believed that it would be extremely hard to mend the ways of these schoolchildren. Proponents claim that uncontrollable students waste the time of both teachers and students, so they believe that pedagogical capability should be used to teach curriculums rather than struggling with this kind of misbehavior. Moreover, champions of this method believe that the negative impacts of these students on the other ones is quite dangerous and inevitable as there are always some schoolchildren who are susceptible to turn to this kind(sort) of manner. Simply put, the more disobedient pupils, the more wrongdoing among peers.

Opponents, on the other hand, claim that being sociable plays a vital role in every individual's life, so interacting with unruly students can make classmates ~~to be~~ stronger in communicating with other ~~people with different~~ characters in society. In addition, every sensible individual asserts that grouping these students may create an awful atmosphere where changing the way of their behavior will be relatively impossible, for there ~~is-are~~ not any other students who can play a positive role ~~in altering to alter~~ their conduct. Also, if we deny unruly students ~~interaction from interacting~~ with other children, we will pave the way for ~~their~~ perpetrating more wrongdoing. In other words, we organize a group of students who are ready ~~to disobey for disobeying~~ and threaten~~ing~~ their teachers.

In conclusion, my personal conviction is that disruptive school students are a part of our society, so it will be quite wrong if we separate them from other students because the disadvantages of this approach outweigh the advantages ~~-of that~~. However, it is incumbent on ~~the~~ education system to provide ~~a special/~~an especial curricular by which we will be able to ~~help them change/~~mend their ways.
