

In some countries young people are encouraged to work or travel for a year between finishing high school and starting university studies.

Discuss the advantages and disadvantages for young people who decide to do this.

The matter of how the schedule of students should be upon graduation from high school has been an area of concern during the last decades. For instance, there is a recommendation that we will discuss about it. If we motivate our offspring after finishing their studies at school to have a travel and then start their education at a higher level, it would produce ~~made~~ a beneficial result~~s~~. This suggestion has made a heated debate between authorities.

Some researchers opine that by allocating a certain amount of budget to students and providing them with some pedagogical journey such as holding some courses besides other leisure activities, and furthermore visiting modern~~extended~~ factories or other kinds of their feasible future job vacancies, not only do we notify them how they could be effective in their society, but also it could be a kind of warning alarm to remind ~~recall~~ these young generations of their responsibilities in the future. In addition, being in some tranquilizing atmosphere, graduate~~d~~ ~~students~~ can concentrate more on their life and make a conservative decision. What is more, students who have a career during the period of time between high school and higher levels can save more money and spend their possession on educating in a high ranked university.

Despite these positive sides of the given statements, further analysis brings up some drawbacks. For example some researchers assume that allocating time to work or having a vacation before education at school, students waste their time, hence education is the urgent priority to this young individuals. In fact there are ~~is~~ not any provened and undeniable benefits associated with the given idea.

Most people, myself included~~included me~~, claim that students had better ~~to~~ have a duration of time to become more independent and find their favorite life style or choose either their field of study or a vocation to do. The more snap decisions, the more regretted in life.