People attend colleges or universities for many different reasons (for example, new experiences, career preparation, increased knowledge etc). why do you think people attend colleges or uinversites.

Nowadays, the majority of individuals are eager to continue their education either at universities or colleges. There are numerous underlying reasons, from my perspective, some of which will be discussed here.

First and foremost, attending universities paves the way for people to have a decent life in the future, inasmuch as not only are there high demandss for well-read individuals in the market, but also society has a positive attitude toward educated people, so the aforementioned individuals have both a decent job and the a chance to get married to with the upper class of society. The more education, the more golden opportunities.

Moreover, many experts claim that most of the individuals continue their learning to hone their both social and practical skills which enables make them be able to settle their daily issues. Simply put, the majority of educated people are capable of ~~to~~ repairing their appliances as well as being able to interact with their relatives and friends in a sociable approach when they are confronted with social or personal problems.

Last but not least, I believe that some people continue their education in order to be independent and also broaden their horizons. In other words, continuing studies givess them the a chance to of leaving families and stand on their own feet. Furthermore, they can develop their relations, understand the real world where they will be faced with problems and resolve their issues without the help of their parents.

In conclusion, my personal conviction is that going to universities is a psychological demand by which people can regulate their behaviors and lifestyles as well.
