

More and more people are migrating to cities in search of a better life, but city life can be extremely difficult. Explain some of the difficulties of living in a city. How can governments make urban life better for everyone?

Cities are often seen as places of opportunity, however living there ~~it~~ leads to large a number of immigrants who ~~leaves~~ their own locations in hopes of just-~~hope for~~ a higher quality of life. Whether or not this is good thing for community, is a moot point.

Living in the cities obviously is more safe and comfortable in comparison with living in the countryside. However, inhabitants of cities have to pay higher prices for housing, transportation and even food. As a result, the cost of living is likely to be much higher than that it is in small towns or villages. Additionally, a big part of their time is employed in traffic jams every day. We can quote the example of Tehran as a metropolis with a vast crowd gathered. Furthermore, the air quality in cities is often poor, due to pollution from traffic, and the streets and public transport systems are usually overcrowded. As a result, city life can be unhealthy and stressful.

However, there are various steps that governments could take to tackle these problems. First of all we ~~it~~ ~~needs~~ to pay more attention to old structure parts of the city that are is usually crowded with a heavy traffic. Secondly, by farming green places and popularization of electrical vehicles we can help to reduce the air pollution. For instance, in Beijing authorities by investing in electrical motor cycles not only could decreased ~~the~~ traffic, but also really help to air and noise pollution. A third option would be that by moving industriesy and jobs to regions, they can create make a better atmosphere for living.

In conclusion, governments can play a vital role in for promotinge the quality of life for all residence-residents by providing modern transportation systems and a better structure for mega cities.
