

In many countries the problem of drug-taking is increasing. Governments and the general public are particularly concerned about young people using illegal drugs such as marijuana, ecstasy and heroine. What methods could be used to prevent young people from taking drugs? Is it appropriate to send young drug-users to prison? Give reasons for your answer.

Throughout the world the number of young drug-users is rising constantly. Societies are anguished about young drug-users. There are various methods to prevent them from using drug or help them after they got involved with it. but in my opinion, prison is not a beneficial approach manner.

Unfortunately, the first way that comes to mind of many persons to prevent drug abuse /young people from using drugs is to send them to prison which ~~Which~~, I think is a very inappropriate and even unfair solution. Firstly, detention is for criminals and we have to be aware that addiction is not a felony and the addicted ed person is not a felon but we should know them as patients/ill persons. secondly, they will be in touch with numerous villains that can have negative effects on their mind and even put their lives in danger or even learn the leatest methods of crime commission.

Instead, there are more efficient measures to help young drug users. With some methods we can prevent them from becoming an addict such as ~~Such as~~ family support, parents should know the fact that one of the most common reasons of addiction has roots in family. Therefore, they have to assign lots of their attention, support and time to their children especially once they are at the age of reason. it is a very important stage in a child's mental growth and they are so extremely sensitive. thus, they might take wrong decisions which that finally leads s to addiction.

There are also some ways to help them quit like counselling sessions, occupational therapy and medical treatment. in my estimation, most of these follow one goal to give them motivation because without a good reason they won't do away with drugs which has been a sedative for them for a long time.

In conclusion, we have to try to preserve ourselves and beloved ones from this misery at first place and if we didn't succeed then we have to use suitable manners to recover them and arresting should be our last option.
