

In many countries the problem of drug-taking is increasing. Governments and the general public are particularly concerned about young people using illegal drugs such as marijuana, ecstasy and heroin. What methods could be used to prevent young people from taking drugs. Is it appropriate to send young drug-users to prison? Give reasons for your answer.

Due to scientific ~~advances~~ ~~promotions~~ in different fields of study such as chemistry and pharmacy, most of ~~the~~ researchers find the chemical matters' ~~constituents/components/~~ingredients easily. In addition, some of them mix different items together and make new substances. Some of which play a pivotal role in alleviating diseases' symptoms and some others are not useful and negatively affect consumers' mental or physic. One of the effective ways to decrease the number of users is advertising through ubiquitous medias such as TV programs. In this way, not only do individuals get familiar with different kinds of drugs, but also they are warned regarding the implications of becoming addicted to some ~~habits/~~things in their life.

Teaching at school, students ~~are notified~~ about some side effects of opium. It means that increasing information of pupils associated with consuming drugs in a negative way is like a contributor in tackling this difficulty. That young generations are free to choose their favorites is an undeniable fact, hence they can shape their favorite lifestyle based on the atmosphere and their outlook on life. Thus, guiding under aged peoples' mind and teaching them not to consume drugs is better than ~~making-imposing~~ limitations and obligations. In contrast, from some researchers' point of view introducing harsher sentences leads to ~~decreasing declining~~ the ~~incidence quantity~~ of ~~addicted people~~ in society. For instance, punishing drug-dealers or persuading managers of companies ~~to avoid~~ recruiting addicted people. ~~an~~Other notable solution is exposing young generations to a ~~variety of~~ hobbies such as aqua-parks, well equipped sport centers, cinemas and theater ~~hall salons~~ and encourage them to do exercise regularly.

The question ~~about~~ whether imprisoning young ~~addict~~ is an effective solution or not has sparked a heated debate among people. I, personally, believe that ~~sentding~~ to jail, ~~addicts they~~ become completely disappointed about their future. Furthermore, they would establish a relationship with some delinquents who could ~~negatively affect afflict~~ them and even learn doing worse deeds that had been completely unknown to them before. Society had better consider them ~~patients/~~sick members and try to ~~treat/~~cure them. To this end, at first authorities should find these members of the public. They can send employees to take blood experiments regularly after knowing the consumers, they can provide them with some psychological courses that ~~remind recall~~ them there are numerous people like their friends and blood relatives who are waiting ~~for to~~ them ~~to define~~ a deadline ~~for to~~ them. And then ~~the~~ second examination reveals ~~that what how-many~~ percentages gave up using.

On the whole, drug-users are not offenders and should not ~~be sentd~~ to prisons. It is better to treat them like patients.
