

Do you agree or disagree with the following statement: "A person should never make an important decision alone."

It is obviously true that a human life is made by choices that can bring positive as well as negative outcomes. While some people posit that an individual should discuss with others in order to make a right decision, others believe in different approaches.

To begin with, different people have a distinct/distinguished opinion. Each person may have a different point of view ~~and~~ perspective for such decisions. Hence, it would be helpful to know even the side effects before reaching ~~to~~ a choice. Therefore, the possibility to make a mistake is potentially huge, especially when an individual decides sd to take an action alone. As an illustration, a friend of mine recently bought a second-hand car without consulting with an adept/connoisseur. As such, the car which he bought had some internal damages. If I were my friend, I would definitely seek advice from an expert.

Furthermore, I think that making an important decision alone is unacceptable especially for ~~those who are the~~ CEOs of major companies. Imagine a food company wants wishes to change the taste of its product. Not only does the company make sure that their customers like the new taste, but also they have to consider all aspects of their action. In this situation, the risk of altering is too high. Their action may lead to getting rid of company's shares, ~~thereby reducing and as a result of this declining~~ the value of the company as a whole.

To sum up, I strongly believe that a human should always consult his relatives or colleagues when making an important decision to avoid possible mistakes.
