

In many counties schools have severe problems with student behaviour.

What do you think are the causes of this?

What solutions can you suggest?

Have you ever seen challenges teachers have with students' disorders through media? Dealing with silly behaviours ~~are-is~~ now an integral part of a teacher's professional life since such ~~students' s~~ lack of respectful interaction with others has become widespread recently mainly because of industrial development particularly in urban life. Contrary to previous generations, there are always a number of students whose behaviours contradict normal reactions although they may have quite distinguished parents. Observing some pupils who not only do not respect their teachers but also are vicious with their peers, schools staff are now completely frustrated.

To the best of my knowledge, there are several causes to create such a serious problem at school. To begin with, luxury lives, particularly in cities, result in both parents ~~to-work~~working to earn more income, ~~z~~ having no time to spend with their children. It seems obvious that the last resort for the parents is either to keep their children in a nursery or leave them alone at home both of which contribute to the development of disorders in children in my country.

In addition, owing to monetary reasons, many parents make a decision to have one child according to which the single child will be cherished in every stage of development in his or her life which leads to spoiling him or her. Another possible factor in this respect is that many parents who cannot dedicate sufficient time to their children make attempt to make up for it with providing them with substantial facilities which ends in raising selfish attitudes in the children.

Many solutions ~~s~~ have been devised by established teachers, psychologists, and wise principals from a number of angles. I maintain that the first and foremost way to address the issue entails the cooperation between parents and schools. Parents should ~~became~~become aware of the ~~idea-fact~~ that many disorders observed in their children can be traced ~~d~~ to themselves. They will be witness ~~to~~/of silly reactions in their children, unless they learn how to deal with inferior responses first hand. Such category of parents are also highly ~~suggested~~advised to have close ties with a psychologist regarding ~~to~~ their children's s behaviour and their own responses.

In conclusion, parents should recognize that what causes ~~sd~~ selfish behaviour to grow in their children is the very notion according to which they desire to provide considerably for their family. If parents ignore a luxury life in order to have enough ~~time-time~~ with their family, the beneficiaries of this resolution will be themselves in the first place.
