

Topic: Disruptive school students have a negative influence on others. Students who are noisy and disobedient should be grouped together and taught separately. Agree or disagree?

Nowadays there is at least one disobedient child in almost every family. First of all the most paramount matter is to know the hyper students psychologically. It's not fair to call the students hyper active because of our impatience whilst only an expert should be the judge in this regard/note that whether a student is hyper or not.

In my opinion separating those students can have way-very important negative effects on them. These children are fundamentally problematic and if we separate them they may think that they are rejected from school, others and even society. However Therefore, this is not the solution. We, the adults, are supposed to find some useful ways to overcome this problem.

I assume that the administrators of school should make the class and school more enjoyable for all of the students so that they can learn easily and have no wasted time to think about misbehaving lazy-doings. In this way everyone in class can understand everything and no one would be bothered. Another way is to distract them. For example make-we can keep them as busy as possible they can so that they have no time to make noise and distract the class. The third solution is to make them attend in sport classes. This way they can release/free their energy, play more and have more fun which can cause them more relaxation.

On the other hand provided that if we don't do anything about naughty children, others may suffer from them causing. This can cause others a low quality of learning, learning-acquisition of inappropriate behavior and losing their interest to-in school. The less interested the students, the lower the quality of learning. This can not only can affect their learning but it also can influence on their education and even future life.

In conclusion, due to the above-mentioned reasons something-certain measures/actions should be done-taken about naughty/unruly students but I strongly believe that the solution is not separation. This-it is highly recommended that we consulting a psychologist rather than choosing some wrong solutions which can harm these children.
