Mobile phones and the Internet have made it easier to stay in contact with other people. However, as a lot of time is spent using telephones and computers, there is less face to face contact and direct communication.

Is the growing use of communications technology a positive or a negative development for society?

Amin

With the increasingly rapid development of Information Technology, today even children possess cell phones ~~and it~~which accurately illustrates how ubiquitous these devices have be~~come~~n. While there are valid arguments to the contrary, some experts still believe humans benefit from the gadgets including telephones, computers, and the Internet. This essay focuses on why the usefulness of such devices overshadows their drawbacks.

First and foremost, given the fact that people give their full attention to their mobile phones everywhere, some part of the community suffers from the people surrounding them staring at their devices with little attention to their families. ~~Indicating~~ complaining people are continuously texting at the parties, psychologists are worried about this trend which in turn will certainly lead to the emergence of specific social illnesses, such as shyness.

Although a number of scientists criticize excessive usage of communication technology in the contemporary life-style, its positive sides are indisputable, ~~either~~too. Proponents of the constructiveness of tele-communications state that society will enjoy using such utilities provided individual people utilize them properly. Regardless of their locations, branches of a firm can take advantage of radio contacts which in turn not only facilitate their project implementation but also lower their overheads.

What is more, who denies that the Internet paves the way for researchers? Browsing the web through computers, scientists are able to accelerate the processes of their studies, as they raise their awareness of other researchers across the world. Moreover, a variety of businesses today apply social networks to advertise their products. In the past, the cost of every product reflected the expensive advertisement/advertising strategies companies used to attract/lure customers.

In a nutshell, despite its negative points, the public has experienced numerous benefits it has acquired through the use of contacts across far locations. If people were ~~thought~~ taught at elementary school~~s~~ how they should utilize communications technology, we would not be witness to the usage wrongly.