

According to a recent study, the more time people use the Internet, the less time they spend with real human beings. Some people say that instead of seeing the Internet as a way of opening up new communication possibilities world- wide, we should be concerned about the effect this is having on social interaction.

How far do you agree with this opinion?

In recent years, the usage of the internet has dramatically increased among people and especially the teenagers who spend a considerable amount of time ~~on~~ surfing the social network. Although some people believe that it has generally opened up new communication possibilities, ~~however~~ it negatively affects people's social ~~livelife~~. Therefore, I tend to agree that the internet has a significant impact on individual social interaction.

It is true that using the internet for long hours can cause a detrimental impact on ~~either-both~~ emotional and physical health. For instance, it would damage both physical posture and brain cells meanwhile, ~~leadings~~ people ~~to end~~ up addicted which is ~~testament~~ to seclusion and alienation. Moreover, the social network addicts would have difficulties in forming face-time communications. They may have a fear (~~in~~) ~~approaching~~ ~~with~~ the people especially with those of ~~a~~ different gender.

In contrast, the benefits of ~~the~~ visual world cannot be denied. Nowadays, people can ~~contact to~~ their families and friends more easily and cheaply over the long distance. Furthermore, many businesses these days depends on ~~the~~ internet since many conferences and meetings ~~are held~~ ~~dispose~~ via video calls.

In conclusion, although the internet has massive advantages in different aspects, ~~but~~ I opine that ~~its the~~ usage ~~of it~~ should be eliminated. In addition, people should dedicate more time to visual interactions.
