

Some people say job satisfaction is more important than job security. Others believe that we cannot be expected to enjoy the job continually and having a permanent job is more important. Discuss both views and give your own opinion.

There is a growing controversial debate between those who advocate for having a satisfactory job and other members of society whose vote goes for having a permanent career regardless of job satisfaction. However, I believe job satisfaction is more important than the job security, and in the following paragraphs I will elaborate my viewpoints.

Being involved in an activity we enjoy is one of the main factors leading to success and happiness and that is why some groups hold the idea that of having a satisfactory job is more important than a job with an acceptable security margin. Keeping in mind that we spend most of our time at work, a lot of people believe we must be involved in a career we appreciate/enjoy or else it can lead to irreparable damages to our mental health due to a sense of frustration.

On the contrary, in these days having a secure job is extremely important. We do not have to forget that there are some jobs that no one likes s to do them. Some clear examples of unsatisfactory jobs could be funeral services providers, sweepers, and clinical waste disposal collectors. That being ing involved in such activity is unsatisfying is an undeniable fact.

In conclusion, I hold the idea of spending time on with an activity we feel pleased with/enjoy. I think our time for life so limited that if we spend it in a way that we do not like, at the end we face regret and sorrow. In addition to this, many may lose their mental health and this definitely costs s more than what they earned during their working period.
