Nowadays technology is increasingly being used to monitor what people are saying and doing (for example, through cellphone tracking and security cameras). In many cases, the people being monitored are unaware that is happening.
Do you think the advantage of this development outweigh the disadvantages?

When we are asked about the domination of technological breakthroughs, it raised a highly controversial issue is raised as to whether they violate individuals' privacy or they are considered an adequate security measure in order to protect them against criminal activities.

First and foremost, despite the fact that technology is considered assigned as an inevitable feature of the modern lifestyle giving rise to facilitating every aspect of daily life, it is the breeding ground for invading individuals' privacy. In other words, thanks to the thriving technology, new gadgets such as smart phones have eliminated the barriers of personal isolation due to sharinge a large amount of personal information. For instance, sharing the location and wiretapping the private conversations by abusing technology, individuals ' lose privacy nowhere to be found. New technologies lure individuals into sharing their private details, hence their difficulties.

On the other hand, technology is deemed to secure individuals from serious misconduct. To put it simply, although both CCTVs and trackers intrude on people's peaceful life, they give assistance to authorities on security. Only when security sections can protect individuals against criminal activities, do they observe people's activities. By way of illustration, either CCTVs are considered an effective deterrent against misbehavior in the shopping centers or cellphones tracking are deemed necessary in frequent crime frequent occurrence. Consequently, not only does monitoring people help security sections, but also it gives rise to them they being aware of their behavior in society.

To put it in a nut shell, thanks to technologies, people can attain a vast range of facilitiesy in their new lifestyles at the expense of demolishing disturbing themselves their own privacy.