

Do you agree or disagree with the following statement? A person's childhood years (the time from birth to twelve years of age) are the most important years of a person's life. Use specific reasons and examples to support your answer.

All of us have three periods in our life including babyhood, childhood and adulthood. One of the question that arises here is which of these three periods is ~~more the most~~ important. In this passage I clarify why the first 12 years of our life is the key years of life.

Firstly, the main part of each person is their ~~characteristics~~ character which is formed in these crucial/formative years. Trying to imitate every detail of their parents' behavior, children are more ~~prone~~ likely/ready to learn, hence parents can teach them a lot. To be more illustrated perverse character of teenagers makes s them ~~to~~ not listen to their parents. In this way, not only do children learn morality and can distinguish good and bad but also, they learn how to behave toward others. For example, if their mother respects s their grandmother, they learn to admire their own mother when they grow up or if the iry father joins ~~to~~ a charity, they learn to be interested in social causes.

Furthermore, monitoring children in these years is easy because they're too naïve to start lying. Parents can control their relationships by sending them to an appropriate school and teaching them to choose reliable friends.

Secondly, the first period of life is the most vital years to learn different skills. Learning a new language, playing football, dancing ballet, and these kinds of activity not only show ~~up~~ their skills for choosing their major and future job, but also their interests.

In conclusion, although including the main years of people's lives, adulthood is directly affected by babyhood and childhood.
