

In many places, new homes are needed, but the only space available for building them is in the countryside. Some people believe it is more important to protect the countryside and not build new homes there.

What is your opinion about this?

The increase of population over the last half century has forced many countries to destroy their green environments and turned them into high-rise buildings to meet accommodation needs of their huge population. However, seemingly if this trend continues, people might be deprived of clean weather and beautiful landscapes of the countryside in future which will be a disastrous outcome of urbanization.

Over the history, human beings ~~have~~has always changed the nature according to ~~his~~their needs and desires which consequently has affected life of many other creatures. For instance, cutting trees and destroying jungles ~~where~~which have been the habitat of many animals ~~have~~damaged the ecosystem in manifold ways. That is why we observe many quite rare animal species which are on the verge of extinction. Another clear example of human manipulation in nature is removing the necessary vegetation from soil that is one of the main reasons resulting in unexpected floods over the world .In addition, many other environmental issues such as global warming and water scarcity challenging our survival on this planet in future are outcomes of human manipulation in the surrounding environments.

On the other hand, people have to look for new solutions to meet their dire need of extra place for living and their other activities. .Facing land scarcity in many parts of the world, many cities, throughout the world, have become metropolises where individuals live and work in skyscrapers. To address the problem, a practical solution would be encouraging people who are living in areas struggling with lack of adequate lands to immigrate to districts which are less populated and ~~has~~have ~~thea~~ capacity to accommodate more people without damaging green environments anymore through offering motivating initiatives by official authorities in each country.

In conclusion, I believe we should treasure our natural resources and do our best to preserve them as much as ~~it is~~ possible. Otherwise, there is no doubt that a bigger tragedy than home scarcity will happen to all creatures on the earth in future.

Lands = countries
