

Some people think that air travel should grow without a limit, while others believe that governments should limit it. Discuss both views and give your own opinion.

Air travel has brought significant changes to our lives in recent years. Although, there remains some disagreements as to whether this mode of travel should increase or not, some strongly opine that governments have to limit traveling by planes. While this essay considers both viewpoints, I personally believe that the benefits of commercial planes outweigh their drawbacks, so there must not be any kind of restrictions on air travels.

On the one hand, commercial planes can save passengers' time up to even 50 per cent. Travelers can travel from one continent to another within seven hours, and this is not feasible by any other means of transport. Keeping in mind that air travels are much safer than other ways of travel such as roads, encourages people to select planes than cars or trains. That new demands for chefs, taxi drivers and airport operators to check in passengers is another undeniable advantage that encourages us to travel by air.

On the other hand, we do not have to forget about air and noise pollution created by air planes. These gigantic vehicles consume a great deal of fuel, and consequently produce a lot of pollution. That is why airports are located out of urban areas. One of the reasonable claims of those the ones who ask the governments to introduce new laws to limit air flight is the noise and air pollution produced by planes. In addition to this, traveling by planes can be considered risky for people's health. Air pressure and humidity is will change during the flights and frequent flyers will face life-threatening problems in long term.

By the way of conclusion, I once again reaffirm my position that air travels has a positive impact on modern life because of its influence on economy.
