

Many people nowadays travel abroad for their university education. Why do people do this and would /will you consider doing this yourself?

Migrating for educationing is one of the most popular reasons that people leave their country. If you have a quick tour in every internationally famous university such as MIT and Oxford, you will see many emigrant students who are studying beside their local counterparts.

There are many reasons that force someone to leave their home and study abroad. Firstly, brilliantly well-educated professors who teach and research there can be an extremely strong encouragement for anyone. Therefore, talented students around the world make their best effort to be accepted by these professors and work beside them.

Secondly, many universities may lack /have not enough pieces of equipment and many majors in college require highly professional pieces of equipment. The more expert these tools are, the more expensive they become, hence the inability of many universities in buying them. This could lead to many talented students leaving their home and study abroad.

These two reasons, which was-were mentioned above, are acutely very convincing that make any student ~~to~~-think about leaving his country and studying abroad. I, like any other normal student, can imagine myself in a better university with a better situation for researching and learning. As a result, I am studying hard to be qualified enough to be in a better university with more cutting-edge facilities ~~more expert appliances~~ and extremely significant professors.

In conclusion, not only is-are better professors a reasonable motivation for studying abroad, but also well-equipped universities can make a curious student ~~to~~-think about studying abroad and therefore, many try hard to ~~be~~ deserved to be in a better university.
