

Writing Task 2

Topic: Every year several languages die out. Some people think that this is not important because life will be easier if there are fewer languages in the world.

To what extent do you agree or disagree with this opinion?

There is this view supporting the notion that the extermination of some languages happening every year has positive effects on people due to the fact that it makes life easier for human all over the world. However, the opponents of this view insist on the importance of the various existing languages in the world. I believe that both of these viewpoints are equally important.

Existence of different languages is appealing to many people for some effective reasons. Firstly, different languages show various cultures which reflect historical and cultural heritages that can help people from losing their identity all over the world. Furthermore, extermination of a language leads to loss of a civilization, its history, or even its achievements. Moreover, learning another language makes the opportunity for people to be more creative and innovative.

On the other hand, some support the view that if several languages fade away during every year can make our lives more comfortable due to the fact that people can communicate with one another easier, and it does not need to learn different languages for communication or catch a good job. For example, if people in all over the world speak with just one language, they can communicate together more easily. In addition, people can be informed about the news or read some novels of international famous authors in their mother language. This can lead people to think in the same way and may result in more peace for the world as a whole.

In conclusion, although some support the view that extermination of several languages annually will make our lives easier, others persist in its dire consequences on our cultures and backgrounds. I, personally, think that all these points should be considered all together.
