

People living in the 21th century are enjoying better quality of life compared to people who lived in the previous centuries.

To what extent do you agree or disagree?

Someone believes that living in the 21th century includes greater life conditions ~~rather than in~~ compared to the past time. I partly agree with this idea because, although technology has improves ~~improved~~ impressively in ~~this~~ these years and ~~make~~ made many ~~work~~ tasks easier, life has become more complicated and stressful.

On one hand, nowadays people can enjoy modern facilities and have a much more comfortable life by using technologies in different ways. Firstly, great improvements in medicine have caused a lot of diseases to become curable and many disabilities ~~could have been~~ resolved. For example, some disabled people can live like others by using modern artificial body parts. Furthermore, a lot of hard and harmful work that used to be done by humans now can be done by machines and ~~anymore~~ no more is there ~~is no~~ any harm ~~on~~ in doing these types of work. Finally, many facilities are devised that make traveling and communications faster, safer and easier like planes, cars, the internet, smart-phones, ~~etc.~~, so people have more options to choose for where or how they want to live.

On other hand, people experience higher stress in their daily life in these days because the world has changed faster and workers need proper reaction to these changes and it causes a lot of pressure on people. Moreover, the increasing population of the world ~~makes~~ has created lots of problems such as different kinds of pollution, destroying natural supplies and over-crowding. All these issues can decrease quality of life in developed countries in this century.

In conclusion, I believe that people have been ~~live~~ living in better conditions in recent decades by developing and using new ~~technology~~ technologies although some issues may engender.