

Without capital punishment (the death penalty) our lives are less secure and crimes of violence increase. Capital punishment is essential to control violence in society. To what extent do you agree or disagree to this opinion?

The requirement of having a more secure globe is becoming more sensible in today's life. Severe crimes are happening every day ~~suffering~~ hurting the victims whether financially or physically. To prevent and decrease the offences, ~~official~~ punishments like execution ~~has~~ have been passed, but ~~it~~ this is not sufficient.

Control ~~lose~~ loss has caused lots of death or body impairments in car accidents, street fights or even business troubles. Even though imposing capital punishments on these sorts of happenings leads to more cautiousness, it has not reduced their occurrence. Indeed, the attitude of "the more punishment, the less crimes" is only true about trivial offences. Even in a socially developed and safe community, people do not commit crimes due to higher levels of awareness, not the deadly consequences like death penalty.

In other words, although the fear of crimes' tragic outcome, ~~although~~ can be a way of their prevention, it is not the definite solution. Enhancing knowledge, life style and welfare have the most striking effects on society's security in all aspects. Eradicating destitution and illiteracy are two major contributors to achieving this goal. In countries of excellent education and social welfare, people enjoy their living and are not concerned about their primitive needs of life, so they live in tranquility and peace, while in poor conditioned nations, committing crimes seems the only way of survival, no matter how severe would be the punishment.

To sum up, that capital punishment can induce fewer offences is an ~~un~~ indisputable fact, but it is not the mere /sole and most effective approach. In other words, ~~increment~~ raising public ~~the society's members'~~ awareness and providing life facilities are priorities to achieve the purpose of having a safer society.
