

It is often said that government spend too much money on projects to protect wildlife, while there are other problems that are more important. Do you agree or disagree?

Today, according to the development of industry as well as extremely dramatic population growth around the world, the level of human's manipulation of the environment especially wildlife, for aligning with such changes has escalated markedly. As a result, governments have to spend a great deal of money on protecting of flora and fauna. However, some believe that it is not necessary to allocate such a huge budget for saving wild life, while there are more other important problems.

I do not agree with the above statement. In my opinion, not only is it our ethical responsibility to preserve animal life, but also ~~rather~~ it is a vital task which will lead to saving the human's life in the near future. In other words, if we do not care about ~~the~~ wildlife, no longer can we access ~~to~~ a wide range of food chain. Moreover, we provide a large amount /portion of our pharmaceutical needs as well as the raw materials of the clothing industry by animals. So, the less conservation of creatures is equal to much ~~lees~~ loss of human's required resources.

In addition to the above consequences, the extinction of different kinds of flora and fauna will gradually impact ~~negative effects~~ on the ecosystem. For instance, the extinction of specific plants s will affect the life of certain groups of animals, also ~~the~~ lack of those particular animals leads to the death of other kinds of creatures. Hence, this continuing cycle of annihilation will end inup with the ecosystem destruction. Furthermore, sometimes the lack of food sources pushes the animals to humans' 's territory where they attack people and bring about serious injuries or even death of individuals.

To sum up, it is crystal clear that wildlife protection is one of the most critical subjects which should be taken into account by governments, and allocating such great budget for this problem is not at all ~~the~~ a waste of money.
