

Some people believe that it's not necessary to have internet access to live a full life. What is your opinion? Give reasons for your answer and include examples from your own experience.

Although a large number of people hold the idea that it is mandatory to have access to the Internet to enjoy every aspect of life, others, however, are not that much happy with the technological advances of humans especially of what we obtained during the last 20 years. When it comes to this notion, I opine that although the Internet plays a crucial role in most parts of our life, it is not quite mandatory/obligatory to benefit from the most of life.

The First, and perhaps the most important point regarding a life without the Internet is that, ~~nonetheless~~although, not very long time ago, when this technology was not invented we were living our lives not as easy-easily as these days, but we had a healthier lifestyle from both mental and physical points of view. Despite the fact that before the advent of the Internet we did not have access to the extremely big data which we have these days, I am under the impression that people were closer to one another. That accessing ~~to~~ this much of information is not beneficial to individuals is considered ~~and-an~~ undeniable fact amongst psychologists.

Further and even more importantly, a wide range of crimes could disappear if people ~~do-did~~ not have access to this communication medium. Cybercrimes such as online unauthorized financial activities, violation ~~to-of~~ personal privacy, and copyright infringement are notable examples of the Internet-oriented crimes that can be prevented if people do not use the Internet. Tired of loneliness ~~resulted-~~ resulting from cyberspace, people from all walks of life could socialize with their loved ones more if only this technology ~~was-were~~ not this much available. The more usage of technological gadgets, the less communication between people in societies.

Based on what I said above, I once again reaffirm my position as modern humans could have a more enjoyable life without the Internet. I believe that not only does accessing ~~to~~ the Internet ~~lose-loosen~~ family bonds, but also it leads our lives to a sedentary lifestyle which results ~~to-in~~ so many mental and physical problems.
