

Most people believe that stricter punishment should be given for traffic offences. To what ~~extend~~ extent do you agree?

In accordance with local and international news and statistics which have been reported through urban traffic police officers at an alarming rate , maximum numbers of incidents have ~~been~~ resulted in ~~dying out~~ killing people, ~~were~~ specifically concerning the roads and highways accidents. Generally since the dawn of mankind during whole of humanity history most individuals have preferred to evade from ~~impediment~~ restrictive laws particularly in traffic subjects. hence I strongly argue these lawbreakers should unexceptionally be arrested and ~~being~~ fined financially so that ~~another~~ people take these rules more seriously than before, in order ~~not to pursue for~~ others not to pursue disorganization and law breaking.

Firstly as a matter of concern this crucial and critical target should be investigated and even more intensive practical laws and regulations are required to be established especially in developing countries such as middle-east countries for the sake of more security and safety.

What comes into consideration is that obviously In many regions establishing new rules initially are likely to encounter people contrary action and at some stage maybe lead to their protest against these new laws. However, by raising public awareness they will gradually be more enthusiastic to observe and obey these laws enforced by the government. Since by means of these enforcements their lives will be kept away from any perilous traffic events and their side effects. And somehow they will be able to protect ~~from~~ their citizenship laws about transportation problems.

By and large, people should bear in mind that not only ought ~~to~~ these strict traffic laws and punishments to be established and applied conveniently, but also all individuals themselves should gain the ability of convincing others in order to pay more attention to the laws so as not to be injured by the traffic events.
