

Every year several languages die out. Some people say it is not important because if we speak fewer languages life would be easier.

Nowadays, developing of technology leads to being closer to each other. Most of people know at least one language more than their mother tongue these days. In recent years, several languages disappeared because of many reasons. Many believe we should develop the new languages. Reversely, some individuals opine we should just know one or two languages.

Some people argue if some excessive languages diminish, the life will be better. In other words, they argue the less we know language, the easier we live. Some of them agree to maintain the basic languages which are spoken commonly in the world such as: English, French and Chinese. The other languages should be just spoken in their local area. In addition, some extremists asseverate English as the international language should just be reserved and the other languages should join to the History book.

On the other hand, some individuals believe that language is the basic way to communicate. Not only should not we eliminate the languages but also we should add some new languages to the school courses. Some of these languages are developing especially in the social networks. Language illustrates the culture and history of the people of the region which is spoken. Schools should be more active in teaching languages with some new methods. The more languages children know, the better they can communicate with different people.

In conclusion, I personally opine we should reserve the existing languages in order to get familiar with various cultures which can be included several benefits. Moreover, the linguists should pay attention to the both vanishing and distortion of languages all over the world.
