

Scientists and technology experts seem to be more valued by modern society than musicians and artists.

To what extent do you agree?

This is true that scientists and technology experts are considered much more important and influential than artists by most people in modern society; however, I believe that both artists and scientists have a significant key role in improving of our society.

The science have always provided solutions and approaches for human being's needs since the advent of time, thus it has brought lots of convenience for us. Besides science, the art make great opportunities to express emotions and feelings which are often leaded to expressing human needs. Psychologists are decoding these feelings and emotions as a-language in order to fulfill human's needs and desires. Some of this willingness and needs are nonverbal or not easily expressing, they can be presented as an art such as painting, music and performance. Artists usually put these desires and needs into their artistic works showing needs or consequences of those needs of their society. Psychologists have some approach to interpret these contents and to work on the solutions. As a result, Science and art somehow complete each other.

The art may have illusion and imaginary contents for instance, science fiction movies which their contents are based on scientific facts or non scientific theories. This kind of movies is so popular and appealing among people especially young ones loving science, not only do they create a chance to think about theories but they also encourage them to work on inventing imaginary equipment showing in the movies for example flying cars, human robots and laser guns; Therefore, a movie can be a motivator for scientists too. If there is a desirable target in technology, Scientists will eagerly dedicate their efforts to achieve it. From this point of view, the art can affect the science and technologies.

It is obvious that science impact our life in a good way and the art as well. They work as two elements of a system, fulfilling our needs and wishes, also they have an inevitable influence on each others. In my opinion artists must be praised as well as scientist and technology experts by modern society.
