

Many people believe the government should spend money on faster public transport. Others think that money should be spent on different aspects of public transportation, such as cost reduction and environment conservation. Discuss both views and give your own opinion.

Transportation is one of the main pillars of a modern society without which most of our achievements in civilized communities were not achievable. While many hold the idea that it is incumbent upon the government to dedicate budget to faster means of transport, others, however, maintain that investment in other public issues such as preservation of the environment or reduction in travel fair have to be prioritized. This short essay elaborates on this heated topic along with my viewpoint.

Although a fast means of transport may seem an attractive facility in a metropolitan area, there are definitely other serious problems demanding immediate actions. Air pollution, overpopulation, shortage of drinking/potable water and lack of suitable place to live are just some cases in point. Tired and stressed out of the hectic pace of life in modern cities, people expecting the officials to solve the abovementioned difficulties rather than spending public financial resources on faster mode of transport.

Having said that, investment in faster transportation is to the good of the university students, living in the countryside. Time is an invaluable asset for most students, and by implementing such a facility more students can enroll in major universities located in large cities. That most motivated students come from families with lower income living in the countryside is an indisputable fact. Dedication of a portion of tax revenues s earned from alcohol and tobacco could be a viable solution to provide students with faster modes of transport.

By way of conclusion, I must say that although I agree with the expenditure on research and development in general, considering the deficiencies humans are dealing with at this day and age I argue that spending on faster transportation does not seem necessary. Only after humanity overcame the current issues, would I vote for spending on faster means of transport.
