

Tourism is emerging as a significant source of revenue for many countries but its disadvantages can not be overlooked. How far do you agree with this statement?

Nowadays people more intend to travel and visit new countries than before. It would be under the influence of publicity or psychological theories. Travelling and sightseeing have its own specific proportion in many people annual income. So the tourism industry is flourishing and becoming- becoming one of the most lucrative resources s of any country.

It is obvious that the development of tourism has so many benefits, such as more income from tourists, creation of more new jobs for local people and exposure of culture, although the drawbacks of this development cannot be ignored. We should identify the disadvantages in order to solving them and make the most efficient use of this valuable source.

In my opinion, the first, most significant disadvantage of this issue is that toursit activities can threaten the traditional culture of a country. For example local people tend to imitate the dressing style or food taste of tourists who come to their country. Likewise in the other habist-habits or manners s in life. Over time the general form of people's life is changed and there is no sign of native soul.

Secondly, tourism can affect the environment badly. For instance, accumulation of wastes s in touristic places s or unconstrained construction for tourist accommodation or entertainment in natural resources. It is an irrefutable fact that such damages are not compensable.

Finally, despite the disadvantages s mentioned above, I believe that the benefits s of capital- attraction absorbing investment through tourism outweigh t its drawbacks. So it is worth both the government and people make effort to deal with problems and extend- develop tourism in the country.
