

At the present time the population of some countries includes a relatively large number of young adults, compared with the number of older people.

Do the advantages of this situation outweigh the disadvantage?

As a matter of fact, the contribution of the young population to the development and advancement of the country is irrefutable. Surely, the proportion of ~~older~~ older generation should not be denied, they ~~played~~ played their role in their young age and now they have lots of valuable experiences which should be used by the young people. So I think, for faster development, a country needs more active and educated young population who consider the ways the ~~ancients~~ predecessors have gone but they pass their own ways.

In my opinion, the first point is for the sake of having more energy, creativity and being more familiar with the new technologies, the most effective workforce in every country are the young. Additionally, they have fresh ideas and are free from old superstitions and traditional beliefs, so the young generation, in all ~~the~~ societies, are always pioneers in changing the rules and making adventuresome decisions. Moreover, in comparison with the previous generations they have natural ~~properties~~ qualities which help them being more useful in ~~the~~ country such as learning faster, adapting to every condition ~~easier~~ more easily, and changing their mind without less prejudice.

To put it in a nutshell, though the old generation have valuable knowledge and a deeper look into issues, they should not be considered a burden for the country. Regarding all the advantages mentioned above, the young generation is more dynamic and energetic so they can contribute to the production and job sectors of the country more effectively and this has a huge positive impact on the economic development of ~~the~~ society. Finally, I strongly agree with ~~the~~ this ~~term~~ statement that the advantages of having more young adult generation compared with the number of old people ~~outweigh~~ outweigh the disadvantages.
