

Some people believe that university students should be required to attend classes. Others believe that going to classes should be optional for students. Which point of view do you agree with?

Nowadays, there are several debates revolving around the necessity of presence of university students in classes or its opposite counterpart viewpoint between their opponents and advocates. I absolutely agree with the statement that students need to attend classes due to two important reasons. Firstly, taking a part of students in the university classes is a must for preserving the atmosphere of classes in order. Secondly, that could assist them to be prepared for entering into-society. The main effective points and discussions are listed as follows:

To begin with, in my opinion one of the most essential features of a university class is its discipline and not only may arbitrary attendance at class interrupt it but also create an unmanageable environment. That unexpected absences could influences teachers' concentration is an undeniable fact. In order to be more illustrating, each tutor dependent on what he teach has a schedule for himself in order to divide the lessons during a semester which easily can be offended by unpredicted presence or absence of students. Therefore, the greater the number of the present students's increases in class, the greater the number of discussions will be raised and this which can alter the teachers' pace of teaching.

Another issue that should be taken into consideration is that, not only can participating in class be totally beneficial for students but also will be prepared them to be part of society. For instance, they learn how to make contact with different persons and efficiently work in a team-work. Besides the primary purpose of universities which is increasing the students' knowledge and making them prepare for a job position, they need to hone social abilities of their students as well.

In a nutshell, as I have already mentioned my personal reasons in order to endorse obligation of presence of students in classes, there may be several individuals with opposite perspective. However, the universities make great opportunities for students to obtain helpful experiences and only with attend classes in could this be possible.
