

Student behavior problem has turned to a serious matter. The main cause may be our current life style.

In today's modern society where parents both have full-time jobs, they cannot accompany their children at home from a young age. The children's upbringing mostly falls on their school. So the environment the kids grow up in has become a deciding factor in their behavior, but it cannot be denied that even the limited time they spend with parents has the most influence on them. Parents should learn that they are not allowed to pay more than enough attention because they do not spend enough time with their kids. As a result, we see when children start schooling, they show some problems such as acting spoiled, without any self-control and they may act undisciplined.

It can be very helpful if parents participate in parenting classes so that they can provide a healthy space for their kids to mature in. Another important aspect that should be considered is their schooling. When children are younger, they should interact with their peers. This helps them to socialize and make friends so that they will learn how to share and care. With this when they start schooling we may see less poor manners.

In conclusion, it is very important that the government invest in programs which help children make positive progress in their conduct. With long time planning and by educating parents, we can build a better future and reduce poor student behavior.
