

In some areas of us a “curfew” is imposed, in which teenagers are not allowed to be out of doors after a particular time at night unless they are accompanied by an adult.

What’s your opinion?

In some particular region of America, adolescent are not permitted to go out lonely after a specific time at night by the law. In my opinion, it can be seen as a benefit.

According to published statistic, rate of robbery and crime have been increasing, so after a particular time streets will be a dangerous place for adolescent without their parents for example, if they have valuable things such as money or cellphone or watch with themselves, they will draw robber’s attention and would be attacked by robbers that will hurt them mentally and physically and it will take times to forget the damage of this incident.

Since drinking alcohol in America is free and pubs are opened until morning, drunk people commute in the street during night and maybe they make some unwitting troubles for others such street disturbance or crazy driving or street strife that make the area unsafe at night for adolescent and in emergency cases if they need to be out, they would ask their parents to accompany them.

In conclusion, some argue that the curfew is not a good way to protect our children at night, but I believe for protecting our teenagers from danger at night, government should pass some rules to help the parents protect their teenagers. Therefore, I strongly believe that adolescent shouldn’t accumulate bad experience from night life from these ages, the curfew is necessary.
